

List of Canadian Registered Charities Revoked as a Result of an Audit Over the Last 30 Years

By Mark Blumberg (March 31, 2022)

I recently requested and received from CRA a list of all Canadian registered charities that have been revoked as a result of audit. The list covers registered charities over the last 30 years and provides information such as BN number, legal name, category and subcategory, date received charitable status, date revoked, location, etc.

For those who are interested in the regulation of charities you might find this list interesting. One of the most important tasks of the Charities Directorate of the Canada Revenue Agency is to audit registered charities.

We have written recently about our concerns that the number of audits by the Canada Revenue Agency of registered charities has declined by 75% and how this could undermine public confidence in the charity sector. This has also been discussed in the media.

In addition, there have been some claims by some groups that the audits by the Canada Revenue Agency are biased in some respects. We have discussed these claims in our blog dealing with a current review by the Taxpayers' Ombudsperson.

The list that CRA provided covers 524 organizations. Some of them may still be operating as non-profit organizations even though they are not registered. A few of them may have been re-registered by CRA. Many of them are no longer operating.

The list is an extract from a database and some of the information may not be accurate although the CRA Charities Listing database is fairly accurate.

Keep in mind that the categorization of charities by CRA is not always accurate or consistent and also the CRA categorization of groups has changed over the last 30 years. It is not clear how consistent the classifications are. For example, four charities are listed under "Judaism" and four charities are listed under "Islam". If you look at the list of names you will see quite clearly there are many more Jewish and Muslim charities that have been revoked as a result of audit. Those listed under “Judaism” were more likely synagogues only and those listed under Islam were more likely mosques only. There are many religious organizations that are not primarily a place of worship.

Also keep in mind that the effective date of status seems to refer to when the charity revocation was published in the Canada Gazette and the charity was removed from the list of registered charities. In many cases, the notice of intention to revoke the charity was issued by CRA to the registered charity many years before that date.

Here is a list of the Charities that were revoked by CRA sorted by:

Category

Date of revocation

Name

You may need to zoom to 200% amplification to be able to read the tables. We have also attached these tables below to this article.

If you look at the Charities Listing in some cases, it will provide you with a brief summary of why the charity was revoked. In addition, we have hundreds of letters from CRA on the reasons for revocation posted on our website. For example here and here. Sometimes these letters can be hundreds of pages of material. These letters in most cases are not tested in court and may or may not be accurate but they do certainly give charities a good idea as to what CRA is asserting they were concerned with relating to the charity and its activities. In addition, many of these letters include copies of the letters from the charity to the CRA arguing that they should not be revoked, and this provides some window into the arguments of the charity.

Unfortunately, the CRA has not provided the fulsome guidance that one may expect from a regulator on many topics. There are guidances such as religion and environment that are being held back by the Minister. There are many important areas such as internal controls and administrative costs that are not prioritized and therefore these letters provide some useful information into CRA's views of these topics.

Unfortunately, when it comes to charities in Canada there is a tremendous lack of transparency and therefore often one feels like even obtaining the most basic information is like a dentist pulling teeth. Many Canadians are not going to become investigative journalists in order to find basic information about charities and they are simply going to write off the Canadian charity sector. That is very unfortunate but as we have seen recently there has been a huge decline in public trust in charities and their leadership. Something definitely needs to be done about this and it doesn't appear to me that the umbrella organizations in the charity sector are particularly interested in this topic. On the contrary, some of them seem to be very eager to push for further de-regulation of charities and less transparency.

If you are interested in our views on transparency, here is our Blumbergs' Pre-Budget Submission to the Finance Committee dated February 25, 2022.
