Briefing up to DGO and ACO (contains confidential taxpayer information)

- The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints in Canada (the Organization) was registered as a charitable organization effective June 23, 1998.
- 24(1)
- Although the reporter framed his questions around specific aspects of the Organization's operations, the confidentiality provisions of the Act prevent us from commenting. As a result, we are instead providing general information that addresses the questions.

24(1)

- This is the first media enquiry we've received about this Organization.
- We did not note any noteworthy media attention surrounding the Organization.

Question from 19(1)

I have been doing some work on the finances and charitable giving of the Church of Jesus Christ & Latter Day Saints (LDS) in Australia.

I've also been looking at regulatory filings from the UK and Canada from the LDS Church in those jurisdictions.

I've gone through the accounts of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Canada and it appears for many years its entire charitable spending has been spent offshore to related entities of the US LDS church.

That includes C$67.9m combined to Brigham Young University in Utah, Idaho and Hawaii in 2020. In 2019 that combined spending was C$76.8 million to the same university and those campuses. Similar levels of spending go back to at least five years including C$109m in 2016 to the same university.

- 1) Under Canadian charities law, are charities/churches entitled to charitable status if all the spending entirely benefits a related entity in a different country?
- 2) There appears to be little or no benefit to Canadians here with the main/only beneficiary the US-headquartered LDS Church. If this is allowed, is it in the spirit of the law to allow this type of spending?
- 3) Is tithing and other donations to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Canada, 100 per cent tax deductible in Canada?

Proposed response

[Standard confidentiality - modified] The confidentiality provisions of the Income Tax Act prevent the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) from commenting on specific cases. This includes commenting on the activities or mode of operation of a named charity.

24(1)

24(1) Although we cannot comment on the specific organization you mentioned, we can provide you with the following general information to respond to your questions.

19(1)

2018-02-08] Under the Income Tax Act, in order to qualify for and maintain registration as a charity, an organization must be established for exclusively charitable purposes and it must devote all of its resources to charitable activities that further those charitable purposes. The Act also requires that Canadian registered charities use their resources (including funds, personnel, and property) in only two ways:

- To carry on their own activities, which are those directly under the charity's control and supervision, and for which it can account for any funds expended.

- To make gifts to other qualified donees, which include other Canadian registered charities.

[New, with messaging from CG-002] A registered charity is prohibited from gifting any of its resources to a non-qualified donee. As a result, to meet the own activities requirement, where a Canadian registered charity transfers funds or resources to another entity that is not a qualified donee, it must maintain direction and control over the use of those resources. This means the Canadian charity must, on an ongoing basis, make decisions and set parameters on significant issues related to the activities being funded. For more information about how a charity can use its resources when carrying on activities outside Canada, see Canadian registered charities carrying on activities outside Canada.

Translated from 19(1) 2016-04-11] In regard to charitable tax credits and deductions, registered charities and other types of qualified donees are the only organizations in Canada that can issue official donation receipts that qualify for a charitable donation tax credit or deduction. Donors cannot claim a charitable tax credit or deduction without an official donation receipt. [New] When a registered charity or qualified donee receives a donation, it can generally issue an official donation receipt as follows:

- For cash gifts, a receipt can be issued for the full amount of the gift, minus any advantage received by the donor.
- For non-cash gifts (such as, for example, furniture, clothing, art, or stocks), a receipt can be issued for the fair market value of the property, minus any advantage received by the donor.

For more information on this topic, go to Gifting and receipting and Claiming charitable tax credits.

[Standard leads messaging] If members of the public are concerned that a registered charity, or a member of a registered charity, is not complying with the provisions of the Act, they are encouraged to contact the CRA's Leads Program. The CRA cannot provide any feedback and/or update on leads received, or subsequent actions taken. The CRA's actions can only be made public when they result in a charity being revoked, annulled, suspended, or penalized. The CRA posts such cases in its List of charities. This provides transparency to Canadians regarding the decisions of the CRA with respect to charities.

Question

I have been doing some work on the finances and charitable giving of the Church of Jesus Christ & Latter Day Saints (LDS) in Australia.

I've also been looking at regulatory filings from the UK and Canada from the LDS Church in those jurisdictions.

I've gone through the accounts of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Canada and it appears for many years its entire charitable spending has been spent offshore to related entities of the US LDS church.

That includes C$67.9m combined to Brigham Young University in Utah, Idaho and Hawaii in 2020. In 2019 that combined spending was C$76.8 million to the same university and those campuses. Similar levels of spending go back to at least five years including C$109m in 2016 to the same university.

- 1) Under Canadian charities law, are charities/churches entitled to charitable status if all the spending entirely benefits a related entity in a different country?

- 2) There appears to be little or no benefit to Canadians here with the main/only beneficiary the US-headquartered LDS Church. If this is allowed, is it in the spirit of the law to allow this type of spending?
- 3) Is tithing and other donations to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Canada, 100 per cent tax deductible in Canada?

Title of Article: List of Canadian Registered Charities Revoked as a Result of an Audit Over the Last 30 years

Author: Mark Blumberg

Source: Blumbergs Canadian Charity Law

Date Article Released: 2022-03-31

Summary: The list covers registered charities over the last 30 years. We have written recently about our concerns that the number of audits by the Canada Revenue Agency of registered charities has declined by 75% and how this could undermine public confidence in the charity sector. In addition, there have been some claims by some groups that the audits by the Canada Revenue Agency are biased in some respects.

Title of Article: Aviation museum inches closer to taking flight

Author: Nathan Delong

0000020

Source: New Brunswick Telegraph Journal

Date Article Released: 2022-04-04

Summary: The New Brunswick Aviation Museum has taken another step toward building a new permanent home. The museum held a gala Friday at the Delta Beauséjour Hotel in Moncton to unveil conceptual drawings for a building near the Miramichi Airport and former CFB Chatham air force base.

Title of Article: Where are Canada's most generous places?

Author: Caroline Dobuzinskis

Source: Charitable Impact.com

Date Article Released: 2022-03-29

Summary: Where do you think you can find the most generous Canadians? Do you think of a town or city where you grew up or are currently living, a community you are involved with, or perhaps you are imagining a far-away place with big-hearted people? Take note, your own concepts around norms of generosity can influence your giving. We'll get into that later, first the rankings!

Title of Article: Mormons Inc: Church accused of multinational tax rort

Author: Ben Schneiders

Source: WAtoday

Date Article Released: 2022-04-03

Summary: The Mormon Church has been accused of engaging in significant tax evasion in Australia, allowing its adherents to collect hundreds of millions of dollars in tax exemptions that are not lawfully available to followers of other religions.

Hi 19(1)

The confidentiality provisions of the Income Tax Act prevent the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) from commenting on specific cases. This includes commenting on the activities or mode of operation of a named charity. Although we cannot comment on the specific organization you mentioned, we can provide you with the following general information to respond to your question:

Under the Income Tax Act, in order to qualify for and maintain registration as a charity, an organization must be established for exclusively charitable purposes and it must devote all of its resources to charitable activities that further those charitable purposes. The Act also requires that Canadian registered charities use their resources, including funds, personnel, and property, in only two ways:

- To carry on their own activities, which are those directly under the charity's control and supervision, and for which it can account for any funds expended.
- To make gifts to other qualified donees, which include other Canadian registered charities.

A registered charity is prohibited from gifting any of its resources to a non-qualified donee. As a result, to meet the own activities requirement, where a Canadian registered charity transfers funds or resources to another entity that is not a qualified donee, it must maintain direction and control over the use of those resources. This means the Canadian charity must, on an ongoing basis, make decisions and set parameters on significant issues related to the activities being funded. For more information about how a charity can use its resources when carrying on activities outside Canada, see Canadian registered charities carrying on activities outside Canada.

In regard to charitable tax credits and deductions, registered charities and other types of qualified donees are the only organizations in Canada that can issue official donation receipts that qualify for a charitable donation tax credit or deduction. Donors cannot claim a charitable tax credit or deduction without an official donation receipt. When a registered charity or qualified donee receives a donation, it can generally issue an official donation receipt as follows:

- For cash gifts, a receipt can be issued for the full amount of the gift, minus any advantage received by the donor.
- For non-cash gifts (such as, for example, furniture, clothing, art, or stocks), a receipt can be issued for the fair market value of the property, minus any advantage received by the donor.

For more information on this topic, go to Gifting and receipting and Claiming charitable tax credits.

If members of the public are concerned that a registered charity, or a member of a registered charity, is not complying with the provisions of the Act, they are encouraged to contact the CRA's Leads Program. The CRA cannot provide any feedback and/or update on leads received, or subsequent actions taken. The CRA's actions can only be made public when they result in a charity being revoked, annulled, suspended, or penalized. The CRA posts such cases in its List of charities. This provides transparency to Canadians regarding the decisions of the CRA with respect to charities.

Have a good weekend,
Hannah

Hi,

I'm a journalist 19(1)

and have been doing some work on the finances and charitable giving of the Church of Jesus Christ & Latter Day Saints (LDS) in Australia.

I've also been looking at regulatory filings from the UK and Canada from the LDS Church in those jurisdictions.

I've gone through the accounts of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Canada and it appears for many years its entire charitable spending has been spent offshore to related entities of the US LDS church.

That includes C$67.9m combined to Brigham Young University in Utah, Idaho and Hawaii in 2020. In 2019 that combined spending was C$76.8 million to the same university and those campuses. Similar levels of spending go back to at least five years including C$109m in 2016 to the same university.

Under Canadian charities law, are charities/churches entitled to charitable status if all the spending entirely benefits a related entity in a different country? There appears to be little or no benefit to Canadians here with the main/only beneficiary the US-headquartered LDS Church. If this is allowed, is it in the spirit of the law to allow this type of spending?

Is tithing and other donations to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Canada, 100 per cent tax deductible in Canada?

My deadline is the end of this week, so 5pm Friday your time would be good.

Thanks and kind regards
