Part IV, line 1a	The university holds in its bank accounts monies belonging to external entities with a direct or indirect relationship to the university e.g. Student Associations; fundraising organizations like Friends of McGill; Conference Seminar registration fees where the profits are to be remitted to a third party. There are also some endowments held in trust by the university - the principal as well as the income earned on investments is not at the University's disposal. These amounts are removed from the financial statements to reflect a true picture of the university's financial operations and performance.
Part V, line 4	The endowments are used primarily for scholarships bursaries fellowships and other student awards which compromise 39% of the total. The second main use is the support of the teaching function within various departments and faculties representing 27% of the total. Related to the operations of faculties are chairs of the departments supported by endowments making up 20% of the total. Only 9% of the endowments are specifically directed towards research. The other 5% are donated for specific purposes e.g. maintenance and the replenishment of the library collections and student services.
